Dedication marks EMC growth

"The Crucible" will lead this season's productions at theater

Dress rehearsals are now underway for the Eastern Michigan College Players' first major presentation of the season, Arthur Miller's "The Crucible." Scheduled as the dedication production for the new Daniel L. Quirk, Jr., Dramatic Arts Building, the tragedy will open on Wednesday evening, January 14 and will run through Saturday, January 17. Curtain time at the Quirk Theatre is 8:00 p.m.

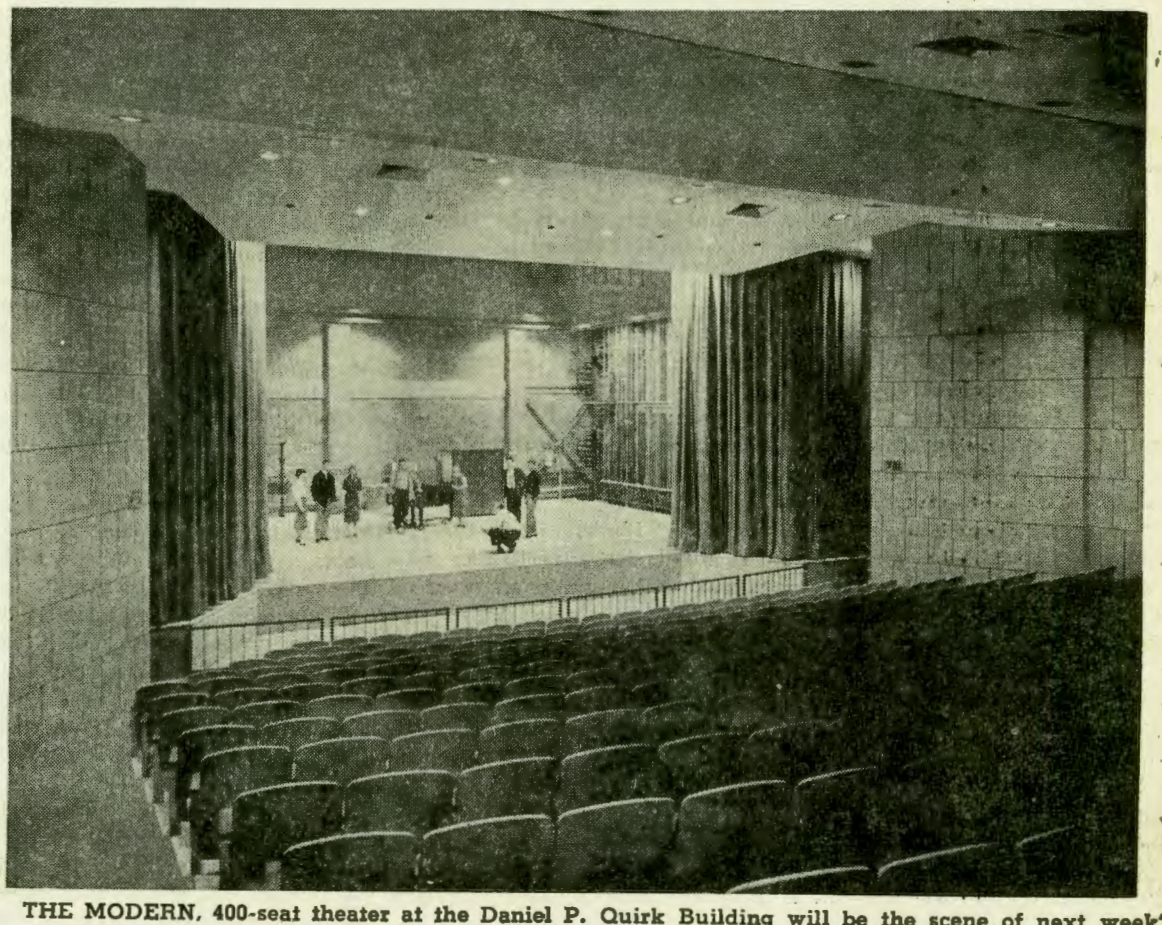
"The Crucible" is generally regarded as one of Arthur Miller's finest plays. Although the action is concerned with the Salem witchcraft trials of 1692, the author is concerned with universal values that are as relevant today as they were then.

It is evident that in the play Miller was drawing a parallel between that early American tragedy and some of the more unsavory aspects of the recent McCarthy hearings. The key question that the drama seeks to resolve is one of individual conscience: how should a man who is entrapped by a terrifying hysteria react? Miller supplies his answer through the central character, a plain-spoken farmer named John Proctor.

Leading roles in "The Crucible" will be played by David Meneghel, Anne Ragan, Laura Dunlap, Richard Thiede, Peter Saputo, Joe DelGiudice, Nancy Raker, Ina Rae Stanton, Bill Dobkin, Foster Cross, and Michael Warren.

Others include Donna Freeman, Cameron Hudson, Kathleen Townsend Wynn, Erroane Conley, Sandy Gayeff, Sallie Walters, Ed Niemiec, Pat Betz, John Newberg, and Leo Murray. Prof. William Work of the Department of Speech is the director, and the settings have been designed by Prof. George Bird.

Season coupon exchange for "The Crucible" is now in progress; the open sale of tickets begins at the Quirk Theatre box-office on Monday, January 12. The box-office is open Monday through Friday from 12:30 to 5:00 p.m., and the phone number is HU 2-3453.



THE MODERN, 400-seat theater at the Daniel P. Quirk Building will be the scene of next week's production of "The Crucible."

Council and court plan rules, seminar

Final arrangements are being made for Pat Dunaway's trip to Northern Michigan as E.M.C. representative to the Snow Queen Contest by the Student Council.

Student Court, the student body judicial board, is in the process of making policies concerning dormitory raids. They are working on procedures to be followed in case the campus encounters them in the future. Such questions are being discussed as; "what will be the penalty for those participating in raids?" and "who is financially responsible for the raids?"

The seminar committee is working on a spring seminar.

There will be a Student Council meeting next Tuesday at 7:00 at McKenny Hall.

Noted dramatist dedication speaker

John Gassner, Sterling Professor of Playwriting and Dramatic Literature at Yale University, will discuss aspects of the American theater at the 4:00 dedication, January 14 of the new Daniel L. Quirk, Jr. Dramatic Arts Building.

For many years a member of the New York Drama Critics Circle and the Pulitzer Prize Jury, he is the author of more than a dozen books, including a series of volumes entitled "Best Plays of the Modern American Theater" and "The Theater in Our Times."

Professor Gassner headed the New York Theater Guild's play department for 15 years, helping produce their major productions. He is a permanent judge with Herman Shumlin, of the Arts of the Foundation playwriting awards and is a senior contributing editor of Theater Arts Magazine.

Radio-TV studios, 400-seat theater included in new $800,000 building

The January 14 dedication of the new $800,000 Daniel L. Quirk, Jr., Dramatic Arts Building heralds an expanded program in the field of speech and drama at Eastern Michigan College.

Previously, such classes met at Pierce Hall and plays were presented in the old Roosevelt School auditorium. Speech and play production activities will now be housed in the new Quirk Building where students will have the use of a 400-seat little theater, professionally equipped stage, radio-TV studio, rehearsal areas, outdoor amphitheater seating 300, stagecraft shops, and classrooms.

The dedication events at the Quirk Building include an address at 4:00 January 14, by John Gassner of Yale University, acceptance ceremonies at 7:30, the student production of Arthur Miller's "The Crucible" the same night at 8:30, and a reception following the play.

The new Quirk Building was designed by Smith, Hinchman and Grylls, Associates, and is one of the newest and most imaginatively planned facilities on any college campus. The little theater has a unique "continental style" seating plan, with no center aisles and rows set several inches farther apart than in conventional theaters. Access is from two side aisles. Special acoustic treatment as well as air-conditioning have been provided.

A small studio theater has been provided for use in experimental, student directed productions and the classroom wing and theater itself are designed to partially surround the outdoor amphitheater.

Other theater facilities in the Dramatic Arts Building include dressing rooms, workshop, costume shop, projection booth and storage areas. Four classrooms, an equal number of faculty offices, and an air-conditioned radio studio, designed to accommodate television in the future, complete the building.

An oil painting of Daniel L. Quirk, Jr., for whom the building is named, and painted by Alice K. Reischer of Ann Arbor, hangs in the theater lobby. Mr. Quirk was a long-time supporter of Eastern Michigan College and a founder and patron of the local little theater movement. Mrs. Nancy Quirk Williams, his daughter, is the wife of the present governor of Michigan.

Cuba's revolution means an end of terror for four Eastern students

Cuba's Revolution is over.

And for four Eastern Michigan College students, last week's events in the island republic mean they'll be able to return home once again without the fear of the police-state terror that has plagued them in the past.

"A block from my home a young boy of 15 was killed by Batista's police. They hammered nails into the top of his head because they thought he was one of Castro's sympathizers."

Stories like this and examples of other fascist-like terror were related to the Echo this week by Manuel Llivina and Jose Mir, two of the Cuban students enrolled at Eastern.

Two others — Rafael Serralta and Maria Martin — were eyewitnesses to the New Year's Day events that toppled dictator Fulgencio Batista from his corruption-ridden throne in Havana and

ONE OF A SERIES

Business Manager's Duties Listed

The job of business manager of the Eastern Echo pays $8 a week. It is the responsibility of the business manager to keep an accurate record of all business transactions.

The newspaper has many expenses. Included are payroll ($43 per week), printing (about $280 for one six page paper), photography (about $13 per week), and many other little expenses too numerous to mention.

The income of the Eastern Echo takes three forms. First, the smallest of the three, subscriptions. For each one year subscription, the Eastern Echo charges $1. Second but not necessarily the middle in size, is that income received for local advertising. Local advertising is submitted by merchants in the Ypsilanti area. The average rate for the local advertisers is $1.20 per column inch (a unit of measure 2 inches wide by 1 inch high).

The third form of income is that received from national advertisers. You might recognize them as the cigarette or automobile advertisements. The approximate rate for the national advertisers is $1.26 per column inch. After the agency takes their discount, we receive slightly less than $1.

The National Advertising Service, Inc. is an advertising agency in New York which deals mainly with college newspapers. This is the only agency with which we contract to run national advertising.

In order that you might better understand the duties of the business manager, I have listed them according to the days they will generally be performed.

On Monday, I check all the insertion orders that have been received during the past week and compare them with the plates received. This is done to make sure that the proper advertisement will appear in its designated issue.

On Tuesday, the advertising manager and I must notify the editor as to how much space has been taken for advertising. She must also be told what part of each page will contain advertising. Advertising occupies about 90 inches in a four page paper and about 140 inches in a six page paper.

Wednesday is the day the business manager does the bookkeeping. This consists of preparing the payroll voucher so that the staff may be paid. I also record the remittances received for statements rendered.

Thursday is the day that I send checking copies (a copy of the paper) to all national advertisers. We must do this in order to receive payment.

On Friday, I must record the current paper's advertising charges on my ledger account sheet. A separate sheet is kept for each advertiser. The Friday nearest to the end of the month is when I send out the statements.

At the end of each semester, I prepare a budget report. This is a report that compares the proposed expenses with the actual expenses. This report is then turned over to the Board in Charge of Student Publications, whose job it is to oversee all students publications.

EMC Librarian Eyewitness in Cuba Conflict

The Cuban revolution was described as "more exciting than dangerous" by EMC librarian Cecil R. McLeod, who spent his Christmas vacation there.

When he arrived in Havana Dec. 27, McLeod expected to spend a quiet holiday season resting in the Hotel Siboney.

But when the fighting and rioting broke out in earnest New Year's Eve, he found himself right in the middle of it.

"The Rebels took over my room and began firing out the window at snipers from the Batista forces," said McLeod. "You couldn't call anything your own."

The sound of small arms and bazooka fire was a novel experience for McLeod, even though he served nearly four years in the Army in World War II.

"In all the time I spent in the service I never heard a rifle shot," he said.

When the Cuban fighting and looting reached its height, McLeod ventured into the streets and took nearly 60 pictures.

"It wasn't the violence that bothered me," he said. "My trouble was that I couldn't get anything to eat."

A general strike paralyzed everything in Havana including food distribution.

"My hotel had no food and all I could buy was a small amount of fruit from a vendor," he said. "A friend of mine had some breakfast food and that's all we had to eat for a couple of days."

Bennington Student Works On Publications at EMC

Mary Hays, a sophomore at Bennington College, Bennington, Vermont, is working in the Office of College Publications under the Bennington non-resident term program.

The non-resident term is a nine week working period in which students participate every year, usually finding employment in the area of their major. The program is intended to acquaint the students with various occupational fields and to provide them with practical experience.

Miss Hays comes from Croton-on-Hudson, New York. While on campus, she will live at Jones Hall.

sent the rebel forces of the 26th of July Movement, headed by Fidel Castro, to power. Serralta, from Havana, and Miss Martin, who lives in the heavily-bombarded city of Santa Clara, still had not returned to Eastern at the Echo's deadline. Both had gone home for the Christmas holidays.

Manuel, a Munson Hall resident, went as far as Miami last week, where his father told him by long-distance phone not to come any farther because of the imminent danger. He lives in Santiago, in Oriente Province, stronghold of Castro's forces.

"Everybody hated Batista," Manuel said. "I think the new government will bring about democracy to our country."

Manuel

"We disagree," said Manuel, asked if the revolution would affect Cuba's attitude to America, "with the United States but I have never heard a Cuban say he hated Americans. We don't like the United States' foreign policy because you don't care what is going on in Latin America, but Cuba is one of the countries where the people are friendly toward Americans. In case a war ever breaks out, Latin America will show solidarity with the U. S."

Said Manuel, "Under Batista we lost freedom of speech and our freedom of the press.

"After 6:00 p.m. in my home town, if you were caught in the streets by the police you went immediately to jail. Sometimes they didn't ask questions. You were shot at once."

Manuel gave an example, also, of the anti-religious overtones of the Batista regime. He told how a squad of Batista's soldiers entered St. Patrick's Church in Santiago, threatened to kill the priests, and tipped over the altar searching for arms they thought had been hidden there. They were unsuccessful in finding any but made off with $1,000 in loot."

Jose

Jose, whose home town is Holguin in Oriente Province, did not go home during the holidays. But he told of the terror he underwent while living in Cuba before coming to Eastern as a freshman this semester.

"In 1956, the day after Christmas," he said, "I was going to a holiday dance. That night Batista's police shot 26 persons in my town, some of whom I knew."

"I had a friend with the rebels," he continued, "who was only 17 years old. He was killed by Batista's soldiers."

Both Jose and Manuel expressed joy at the overthrow of Batista. They were confident that the new government — with its promises of freedom for all viewpoints of political expression in Cuba — would insure democracy for the nation's people and promise a secure future for the students of Cuba.

Display Features College Teaching

By 1970, according to various estimates, college enrollment in the United States will have increased by 60 to 100 per cent over the number of students attending college today.

One educational committee has estimated that in the next fifteen years 484,000 college teachers should be trained to fill vacancies as well as the new positions that will be created by larger enrollments.

The current display in the reference room of the college library focuses attention on the facts and the facets of college teaching as a career. Recent literature in the library on such aspects of the subject as educational preparation, scholarships, academic freedom, salaries, and working conditions should be of interest to any student planning or pondering a career in college teaching.

Copies of a bibliography of selected readings are available at the reference desk.

EMC Student's Book Now On Sale Here

"I'm Handicapped for Life," an autobiographical book by EMC student Gerald Smoot, went on sale in McKenny Hall Bookstore this week.

Brief and frankly written, the book recounts a youth's struggle to overcome the physical handicap of cerebral palsy and the added handicap of "normal" persons' attitudes toward those with the disease.

Gerry, who wrote the account during the summer between his junior and senior years of high school, is now a sophomore at EMC. He describes the things the public does which hinder the handicapped in their attempts to lead normal lives.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Smoot of Dearborn, Michigan, Gerry has gained a partial victory over the disease which originally prevented him from walking and speaking.

He is active in college activities at EMC, and does class assignments by using a pencil to punch the keys. He used the same method for preparing the manuscript of his book, and two others, yet unpublished.

1902 Costs at Old Michigan Normal Were A Far Cry from EMC Today

How much did it cost to be an EMC student back in 1902?

"Expenses are moderate," says the Aurora of that year in a full page ad designed to attract students to the college.

"Three hundred, graduates and undergraduates, go into the schools of the state annually, as teachers, from the Kindergarten through the High School," the ad stated.

And how about the "moderate" expenses?

Well, you could rent a room "for 50 cents to $1.00 each" a week, the ad states. And board could be had for $3.00 a week. To those that didn't demand the best meals, weekly board bills were as little as $1.75.

Registration fees were likewise moderate. Registration was $3.00 a term and $9.00 a year.

For their money, students could enter one of five courses. A preparatory (second grade certificate) course took one year of studies, while a five year certificate course took three years. You could get a life certificate for four years of study or, if you were a high school graduate, you could get one for two years. A degree course for high school graduates took four years of study.

Huron Hoopsters Take Albion 65-63 For Third Straight

by Ken Balcoff

The Eastern Michigan cagers evened their season's record at four wins and four losses as a result of a 65-63 victory over Albion Monday night.

It was Rod Treais who turned the trick for the Hurons in the last seconds of play. With Albion ahead 63-62 Treais was fouled. The Pontiac junior stepped to the free-throw line to knot the score with little time remaining.

Then, as the Britons of Albion brought the ball up court, Eastern stole the ball. After a couple of shots went awry Treais dropped in the necessary bucket with two seconds left.

This was a big night all around for the six-foot-one Treais as he also topped both teams in scoring with fifteen points. Jim Losey led the Britons with fourteen points.

Unfortunately, the hometown fans were deprived, per usual, of seeing the Hurons in their most exciting win of the season. For some reason the EMC quintet has been unable to win at Bowen Fieldhouse so far this season. Eastern hopes to remedy this situation against Hillsdale this Wednesday.

There is good reason to figure on a win over the Dales, the best reason being the Hurons recent conquests in the Flint J. C. tournament.

Hillsdale was stomped on by Flint J. C. while the Hurons readily whipped Aquinas on the opening night. In the title clash Eastern took the Flint team 76-72 while Hillsdale was again crushed by Aquinas in the consolation contest.

It should be pointed out that the leading scorer in both games for EMC was Bill Stephans who will be ineligible for the remainder of the semester. Stephans was allowed to play due to a laxity in eligibility rules for the Flint tourney concerning transferees.

BULLETIN

EMC had its three game win streak broken last night against Hillsdale 55-56. Details next week.

Huron Highlights

by . . . . Bill Forster

As of this date the EMC basketball team possesses a printable record of 4 wins and 4 losses. This is quite a change for the better over the 57-58 squad which entered 1958 with the anxiety of victory still a pressing matter.

Speaking of pressing matters, the most antagonistic sight to this "round-ball" fan is the "stall" which has been employed by Huron opponents in the two games on the Ypsi court. In both the Youngstown contest and the Northern Illinois game the Eastern squad seemed to perk up noticeably in the last minutes, only to be frustratingly thwarted by the old nemesis "stall."

It must be admitted that the "stall" is a very fine and effective defensive maneuver to slow down a revitalized offense. The principle applied is that a team can't score without having the ball. However, the majority of spectators go to see the fast-moving, thrilling, aggressive sport as the game is advertised publicly.

A remedy for this lag at the tail end of a basketball game is in practice in the "24 second rule" which the professional basketball leagues have adopted. This rule says that the team in possession of the ball must take at least one shot during a period of 24 seconds or relinquish the ball to the opposition out of bounds.

I most certainly do not advocate that college adopt a pro-type format for playing basketball. Nevertheless, these are certain innovations such as this 24 second rule adopted by the professionals that surely should be considered. Perhaps if this rule were adopted, the cheering and jeering of Huron fans at the tail end of ball games would not be in vain.

Wrestlers Visit Toledo in 2nd Tilt

by Bob Quick

Next Tuesday the Eastern Michigan matmen will travel to Toledo to face the Toledo University Rockets.

Last year the Hurons came out on the short end of a 24-9, but Coach Russell Bush is quite pessemistic since the team must forfeit the 130 and 137 pound weight classes. For the above reason Toledo is given 10 points "right off the mat," so to speak.

Nevertheless, Bush does plan on a stronger second semester squad with hopes for the return of Ron Brooks, top notch wrestler two years ago, after a semester of "sitting out" because of ineligibility; Tony Papalas, who just came out for the squad recently after a period of indecision; and Tom Hardy, captain elect last year, who was forced out with an injured knee.
